With the time and money, it takes to get a degree these days. You can't always be sure it's still the best path to professional success.

Securing a job is influenced by a number of factors, including the individual and the status of the market, but a degree certainly provides a stepping stone to a successful career, providing the graduate can demonstrate how the learning experience has developed their skills and prepared them for the workplace.

Recruiters recognize the extra value that a graduate brings to an organization, such as motivation and commitment, time management, intellectual acumen, flexibility and of course, future potential. In addition to academic success, it is important that graduates use their time at university productively, making the most of the extra-curricular opportunities available, in order to stand out from the competition and secure their perfect job.

Thus, having a degree puts you one step ahead of the game, helping to create opportunities that may not otherwise have been available to you.
