One way to eliminate the issue of crowding on the roads is to increase the tax on the private vehicles. Extending tax will have an adverse effect on the middle-class people because they have brought their personal cars with many hurdles and if the tax is increased, they cannot bear tax imposed by the government.

Apart from this, the tax amount could be used by the authority to built more roads, improve pavements and parking facilities and thus the traffic jams on roads will be reduced.

However, this will not deter the rich people to use their private cars on the roads.

Hence, congestion problem can be comfortably solved if appropriate precautions are taken and the government has to take their responsibility for controlling the redundant traffic by constructing roads and installing the modern traffic lights. Above all the public should also take the road signs seriously and follow it.
