Some claim that many university courses are worthless and young people would be better off gaining skills in the workplace.

For me, there are several reasons why young people today believe they have the right to a university education. First, millions of new jobs have been created in knowledge industries, and these jobs are typically open only to university graduates.

However, it often appears that graduates end up in occupations unrelated to their university studies. It is not uncommon for an engineering graduate to retrain as a teacher, for example.

In conclusion, while it can be argued that too much emphasis is placed on a university education, my own opinion is that the university years are a crucial time for personal development. If people enter the workplace aged 18, their future options may be severely restricted.

Attending university allows them time to learn more about themselves and make a more appropriate choice of career.
