onto the bank's computers.

A public relations officer from the Tokyo branch of the bank said no money had been stolen. He said the bank's IT security staff told British police last October that they suspected they were under attack. Detectives from Britain's National Hi-Tech Crime Unit then started investigating. They arrested a 32-year-old Israeli man yesterday in connection with the planned robbery. Police are questioning him now in Tel Aviv and expect to make more arrests. They have warned all banks and businesses to take extra care of their computer security, as cyber criminals are becoming more and more skilled.
