One day, a woman biked to the station because she had to baby-sit for her sister. When she arrived at the station, she looked at her watch. Her train was about to come, so she quickly locked up her bike. At her sister's house, the woman held her sister's baby while she was about to live. The sister gave the woman a list of things to buy. Later that day, the woman put the baby in a stroller and went to do the shopping. When she arrived at the supermarket, however, she was annoyed to see that two boys were leaving their bikes right in front of the slope she needed to use. She would have to move them to get into the supermarket. That evening on her way home, the woman went to get her bike. After unlocking the bike, she was shocked to see that she had left it in an area where bikes should not be parked.
