One weekend, a woman was talking to her husband about buying a computer. While their son was outside playing catch with his friend, the mother showed her husband a book about computer education for children. She thought that their son should start learning how to use a computer. The next week, the mother showed her son how to use the computer they had bought for him. The son seemed to be really enjoying himself. A few days later, the son's friend came over to play catch. Instead, the son suggested that his friend come inside and try out his new computer. A month later, on a beautiful sunny day, the son and his friend were inside the house using the computer again. As the boy's parents looked on, the father expressed his concern. He told his wife that he was worried because their son and his friend rarely played outside anymore.

affects parents quite a lot.

No. 4 No. Taxes are high enough in this country. Besides, most people have the chance to attend college, so I think we already have a very good public education system.
