No. 1 Please look at the fourth picture. If you were the woman, what would you say?

No. 2 Do you think people should be more concerned about their eating habits?

No. 3 Japan relies heavily on food imports to feed its people. What do you think about that?

No. 4 In today's society, should schools play a larger role in raising children?

One afternoon, a woman was at home watching a TV program with her child. The presenter on the program asked whether the food people were eating was safe. The woman became concerned about her family's health when she heard this. On the weekend, the woman was shopping at a supermarket when she saw some organic vegetables for sale. Above them was a sign that said such vegetables were healthy and safe, so she decided to buy some. That evening, while the family was enjoying dinner at home, the woman explained to her husband that the meal they were eating was made with the organic vegetables she had bought earlier. A month later, the couple and their son were at the supermarket doing their grocery shopping together. The husband was surprised to see how expensive the organic vegetables were compared with the non-organic vegetables. He

- No. 3 Japan is a very mountainous country, so it's not possible to grow food in many areas. Importing food is the only available solution.
- No. 4 Yes. Most parents are too busy these days to spend enough time with their children. Therefore, schoolteachers need to show children how to become good citizens.
