One evening, a woman was at home with her husband. They were eating dinner and the woman's husband told her that the food was delicious. This gave the woman an idea. The next weekend, she was showing her husband the job advertisements in the newspaper. One of the advertisements was for restaurant staff, and the woman was interested in applying. Her husband thought this was a good idea. A few months later, the woman was working in a restaurant. The restaurant was full and several people were waiting to be seated. The woman was busy cooking food for the customers. A few weeks later, the woman's husband had just come home from work. The woman had left his dinner on the table and was about to leave the house. She told her husband that the restaurant needed her to work again that night.
