Professor: Freud coined the terms id, ego, and super ego in reference to our psyche and how our brain makes decisions. The id is responsible for our basic impulses and drives such as hunger, thirst, sex, and aggression. We can think of a very young child as completely id driven. When the child wants something, take. The natural balance between these two is the ego. The ego mediates between what the id wants and what the super-ego says is ok or not. The ego tries its best to satisfy the wants of the id, while at the same time minimizing the consequences to the individual. Its main priority is the safety of this individual.

and the strictly southern things of before are being forgotten altogether.

There are two main reasons why the South kept its folklore history more alive than the North. The first reason is that southern people traditionally stayed where they were born and raised. When you were
