Leadership Roles

Have you ever considered the various roles that a group leader might take on? There can be many different kinds of leadership roles in groups; two of the many possible kinds of leadership roles are instrumental leadership and expressive leadership. Instrumental leadership is group leadership that emphasizes the completion of tasks by the group. Instrumental leadership is focused on getting the task done. Expressive leadership is different from instrumental leadership. Expressive leadership is leadership that is concerned with the well being of the group; expressive leadership is leadership that is concerned with ensuring that all members of the group are comfortable working together.

Now listen to the passage.

groups in the company had very different leaders.

In the first group, the leader started off each group meeting with an activity designed to help the group members get to know each other. The leader then had the group members each make a positive comment about how the work on the group project was going. The leader ended each meeting by asking group members to send him an e-mail in the following week. In each weekly meeting, the group leader grilled each group member about what he or she had and had not managed to accomplish since the last meeting and made it clear that the work on the list needed to be completed on time.
