The written of compound nouns is somewhat arbitrary. Sometimes they are written as one word as, blackboard, housewife, blackbird. Sometimes they are written as two words joined by a hyphen; as fire-engine, ice-cream, Atty. At-law, son-in-law.

Or even occasionally as two words; as, post office, police station, railway station.

The gerund + noun pattern is always written with a hyphen; as, walking-stick, cycling-shorts, weighing-scale, swimming-pool.
