2. Possessive Case

A noun or pronoun that is used to show ownership or possession is in the possessive case. The possessive answers the question “whose”

Example: General Garcia’s millions is deposited in American banks.

The sign of possessive case is ‘s or ‘ (apostrophe and s or apostrophe)

How to form the Possessive Case

1. To form the possessive singular, add 's to the singular form of the noun.

Example: I borrow Nemias book.

The teacher corrected the students test paper.

Noted: The apostrophe and s is not used with nouns relating to inanimate things.

Example: The leaves of the tree.

The cover of the bed.

The apostrophe and s is used with the names of certain inanimate objects which have become idiomatic from common

Childrens

3. Proper noun ending in s usually form the possessive case by adding 's after words of one syllable and the apostrophe only after words of more than one syllable.

Mr. Burns - Mr. Burns

Mr. Nicolas - Mr. Nicolas

Exception: If the proper name is followed by a word beginning with s, only the apostrophe is used.

Example: Jose Ramos' sword

Douglas' socks

4. In compound nouns the 's added to the end of the word.

Example:      Father – in – law’s command.      (singular)
                 Fathers – in – law’s command.      (plural)

Separate and Joint Ownership or Possession

If the two or more nouns are used together to indicate separate ownership-that is to show that each person possesses or owns something independently of the other-the 's is used after each noun.

Example: Kevin's and Nick's books.

Kevin's and Nick's books were lost in the library.

Vilma's and Coiline's dress are pink.

If two or more nouns are used together or joint ownership-that is to show that one thing is owned by the group jointly-the 's is used after the last noun.

Example: Kelly and Don's father is an architect.

The secretary and the treasurer's office is on the first floor.
