4[A] – Dear Tomoki

GP1 13-3

Dear Tomoki,
I hope you're well.

I read an interesting article in a technology magazine yesterday. It said that thanks to the internet, more company employees will work from home in the future. Do you think that this is a good idea?

The magazine also had an advertisement for an electric car. Do you think that such cars will become more popular?

By the way, I heard that many Japanese people spend their vacations abroad these days. What do you think is the reason for this?

I think that working from home can be a good thing because people don't have to waste time commuting to the office. Staying at home also means people can relax more, which is good for their health.

Regarding the second question, electric cars will become more popular. Not only are such cars becoming cheaper but, they are also better for the environment than regular cars.

As for spending vacations abroad, I think that Japanese people have become more interested in experiencing other cultures, and flights are easy to book online these days.

*I hope my answers helped.
