4[A] – Dear Kei

GP1 10-2

Dear Kei,

I saw a TV program about Japan yesterday. It said that recently, more mothers are choosing to instead of staying home to look after their children. What do you think is the reason for this?

The program, also said some parents make their children study things like math and English when they're only 3 or 4 years old. Do you think this is too young for children to start studying?

A friend of mine lives in Tokyo and her son goes to an all-boys school. In your opinion, is it a good idea for boys and girls to attend separate schools?

I think the recent poor economic conditions in Japan are forcing more mothers to work. Many fathers' salaries have dropped, so it's become necessary for mothers to work in order to help their families live comfortably.

Regarding your second question, I don't think it is good for children to start studying at such a young age. Playing outside with their friends is more important because it teaches them social skills.

In my opinion, it's good for boys and girls to attend separate schools. I've heard they learn in different ways, so it's more effective to teach them separately.

I hope that answers your questions.

Kei
