8 Though not without their critics, television, radio, and newspapers have had an
9 overwhelmingly positive effect on society during the past century.

10 Take public safety, for example. Today, emergency broadcasts warn the public of 11 typhoons and other natural disasters that would have killed countless people a hundred years
12 ago. In addition, news about environmental damage that previously went unreported now raises
13 public outcries that have led to myriad beneficial changes.

14 Another way the mass media has become indispensable is in the realm of politics.
15 Election coverage, exposure of political scandals, and other types of reporting on government
16 have made politics far less opaque and helped to make society more democratic.

17 The mass media also plays an important role in educating the public. Documentaries
18 teach us about life in other countries, helping us to understand and respect foreign cultures.
19 Television has also become a valuable tool for educators because it can have a much greater
20 impact than teaching things through books.
